Interested in fashion retail? Wonder how products are chosen? Curious about customers and their buying patterns? Skilled in relationship building and planning?

If you have a consumer sciences, retail management, fashion retail or design qualification, consider buying as your perfect role.

BUYING

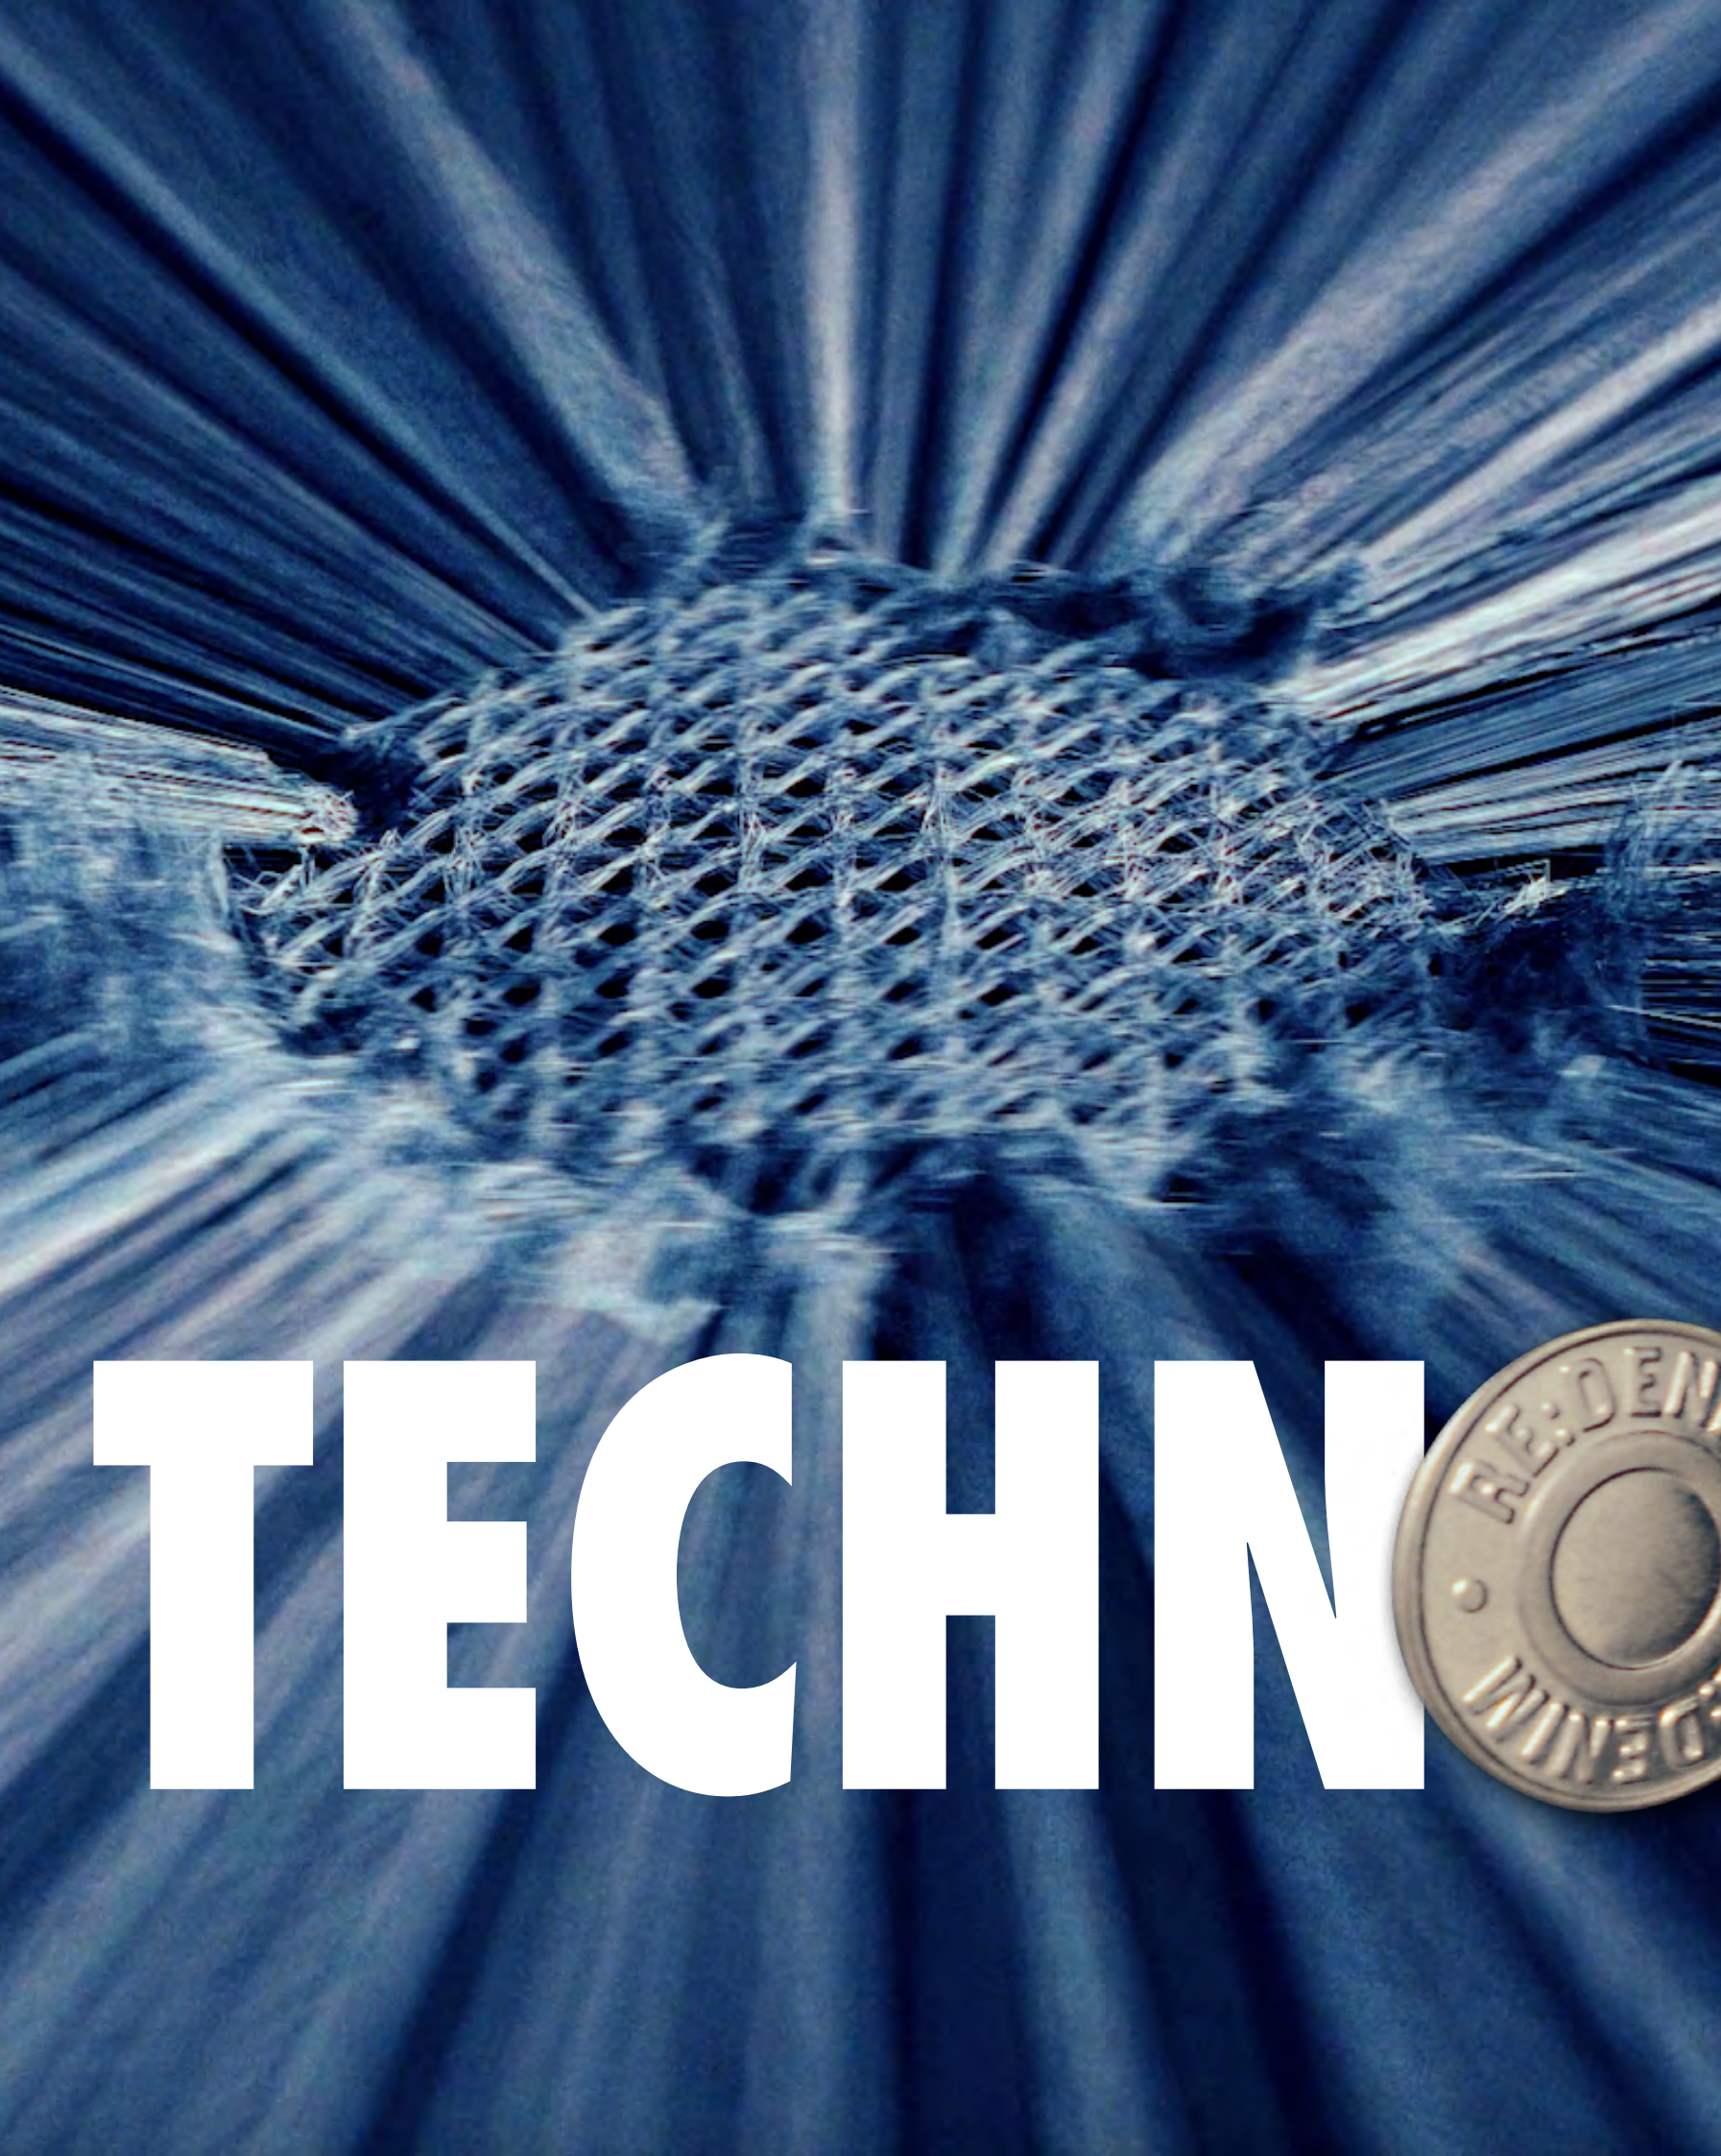

Ever wondered how our stores are intentionally stocked, and how fashion | home | and beauty product ranges differ from store to store, across different locations, for different customer segments?

This is the role of a planner, who works closely with the buyers and technologists to get the right product mix for the right customer at the right store at the right time.

If numbers, forecasting and problem solving are your thing, you might want to consider a career in Planning.
